RECEPTION AND BALL GIVEN THE QUEEN OF TOPEKA CARNIVAL.

Arrival of the Twentieth Regiment at Honolulu-Voting of the Kansas Soldier Boys-Other News From Hawnilan Papers.

The Pacific Commercial Advertiser, which arrived by to-day's mail, has in its issue of November 8 the following account of the reception tendered Miss Rose, the beautiful Hawaiian girl who was gueen of the carnival at Topeka, Kas.: There was rain last might in Honolulu and in Walkiki, but there were no showers in beautiful Manon, with its fresh mountain breezes, its hills and its waterfalls and its hedges and old stone walls and its wide roads and prettily bordered pathways. Perhaps the clouds that often carry rain from the mountain peaks and lose it in Manoa were dispelled by the brilliancy radiating from Puupueo, the valley residence of Judge Hepry E. Cooper, minister of foreign affairs, and Puupueo was in gallant array. It is the handsomest mansion in the islands and last night was sparkling throughout of itself and its exceptional enment in honor of Miss Anna Rose, the Hawaiian young lady who has just returned from the States, where she acted as queen of the Topeka, Kas., carnival. Miss Rose was very prominent while across the ocean and by the manner in which she carried out the duties to which she had been assigned reflected great eredit upon the country of her birth and all its people. It was on account of the enthusiastic manner in which Miss Rose was praised by the Americans and in which honors and notable attentions were heaped upon her as the representative for the occasion of the islands that Minister and Mrs. Cooper decided to give her the local recognition which was so gracefully consummated last evening.
All of the ladies and gentlemen of Hon-olulu were bidden to the reception and oldid were bidden to the reception and ball and the response was very general. Certainly nearly all of Vanity Pair made the journey up the valley so favored in years agone by native royalty. A portion of the regular road is closed for repairs, but the temporary thoroughfare through a big estate is not bad. President and Mrs. Dole were in attendance. So were Minister and Mrs. Damon. The attendance numbered several hundred attendance numbered several hundred.

It is a spacious mansion. The principal rooms for the guests were the large court, with banners hanging from the ceiling and ferns banked from the floor, the reception and dancing half and the makai land. The extensive grounds were illuminated. The band was in a specially constructed lanal. Refreshments were served throughout the evening under the direction of Chapman. Dancing began at 9 and there was a programme of twelve numbers.

The great reception hall, like the other rooms, was all alight from electric lamps. Here were Minister and Mrs. Cooper and Miss Rose. Miss Rose was in white and was strikingly hondsome and quite at case. The flew of guests for an hour was constant. Miss Rose had a smile and a few words for each.

At the conclusion of the reception and dance, and it did not end early, all who were fortunate enough to have been guests declared themselves simply delighted with the Cooper home and hospitality and with the young lady who negutited herself so neatly abroad.

Several of the officers in the Kansas

Several of the officers in the Kansas regiment have their wives with them. The officers of the Twentieth Kansas headed by Colonel Funston are the youngest lot of officers that have passed through Honolulu during the war with Spain. Notwithstanding their age they have all had experience in military matters, having been commented with the militia in Kansas for several years, and are well qualified to command men.

They are all loud in their praises of Honolulu. They claim it is the most beautiful place on earth and say that "it is a dream." Many of them regret that they cannot be stationed here instead of being sent to Manila. Some of them have friends living in Honolulu. Major Metcalf is an old college chum of W. A. Bowen. They are all greatly interested in Miss Anna Rose of Topeka fame. Several of the officers in the Kansas

After Granting a Divorce, Oklahome Judge Reconsiders at Request of Defendant.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Nov. 29.—(Special.) After Judge Hainer had granted a divorce at Pawnee yesterday, to Mrs. Maggie Lawrence, from Sylvester Lawrence, by default, Sylvester appeared and moved to reopen the case, alleging that he was induced to sign the appearance and waive answer by threats of imprisonment. The wife is a wealthy member of the Osage Indian tribe and alleged infidelity on the part of her husband, a white mao, and the records show that in the Pawhuska court he had first begun suit against her for divorce on dentically the same grounds. The judge will reopen the whole case and some sensational disclosures are looked for.

TOPEKA, Nov. 26.—(Special.) Major Thomas J. Anderson, state senator-elect of Shawnee county, will endeavor to secure the passage of a law entirely revising the present statute regulating assessments and taxation. He is now at work on the bill. He has some of the best legal talent in Topeka assisting him in its preparation. A revision of the laws governing this subject has been sorely needed for years, but the subject is so comprehensive that no effor has ever been made to do it. The old law has been patched up now and then, but it is entirely inadequate. Major Anderson will endeavor to have the matter in such shape by the time the legislature opens that that hody can get right to work on it and pass such a bill.

THE GREAT SALT LAKE TRAIL," BY COLONEL HENRY INMAN.

Wales in Tudor Times-Cathedral Bells-History and Romance-New Books for Children-Literary Notes.

There are seven historic trails crossing he great plains of the interior of the continent, all of which for a portion of their distance traverse the geographical limits of what is now the prosperous common-wealth of Kansas. None of these primitive highways, however, with the exception of that oldest of all to far-off Santa Fe. has a more stirring story than that known as the Salt Lake trail. Over this historic highway the Mormons made their lonely hegira to the valley of that vast inland sea. On its shores they established a city, marvelous in its conception, and a monument to the ability of man to overcome almost insuperable obstacles—the product of a faith equal to that which inspired the crusader to battle to the death for the possession of the Holy Sepulcher. Over this route, also, were made those renowned expeditions by Fremont, Stansbury, Lander and others of only less fame, to the heart of the Rocky mountains, and beyond, to the blue shores of the Pacific ocean. Over the same trackless waste the Pony express executed those marvelous feats in annihilating distance, and the once famous Overland Stage lumbered along through the seemingly interminable desert of sage-

Overland Stage lumbered along through the seemingly interminable desert of sagebrush and alkali dust—avant-courieres of the telegraph and the railroad.

The arduous labor of writing a history that would do justice to such a subject must have been very great, and the beautiful edition of "The Great Salt Lake Trail" is a befitting domicile, as it were, for the subject and the name of its historian—Colonel Henry Inman. Colonel laman is the master of an easy and flowing style of expression and has much of the genius of discrimination. The history, comprising more than 500 pages, never grows tedious and is remarkable for its rare vividness in portraying swift movements and wild scenes on the early frontier. Small bands of trappers now move silently before the eye across the great plains, followed by a long line of prairie caravans, and anon the ear is startled by the demoninc yell of Indians which gives place to the swinging too of United States cavalry horses sweeping down the horizon with those who parsue the fleeting murderers of Custer. The Missouri, the Platte and a myriad of smaller rivers thread their silvery way winding over interminable plains where their ripples only break the vast silence, while away off forther in the West arise great, snowy summits as sentinels over the weary hunters that sleep beneath the stars. All this is told with the charm of convincing eloquence and in such a manner that the world must prick up its ears as long as Colonel Inman tells the story of bave adventures on the American frontier, through the medium of his volume.

WILLIAM GRIFFITH.

Wales in Tudor Times.

Archaic terms and obsolete expressions of Gaelic origin abound in the story of medieval Wales, by Owen Rhoscomyt. Called "The Lady of Castell March." If the reader will take all that he remembers about the Scottish Highlands under the clan system, about the Borders in the days of the Raiders, and about the Ireland of the Pale, and shake all together the result will give some idea of the times in which this story occurs. There is a deal of brave fighting, and we always hear, or expect to hear, the rasp of steel biting steel biting, the property split over the book to make it plable. The gwindy was windy where Owen wrote. tery split over the book to make it pitable. The gwindy was windy where Owen wrote the tale, and so the candle went out on the mountain and left the sequel all by itself wrapped in the cradle of the deep. (New York: Doubleday & McClure Company.)

Roundheads and Cavaliers. The time of Cromwell was exceedingly rich in such stuff romances are made of, and Mr. J. S. Fletcher has discovered this and Mr. J. S. Fletcher has discovered this again in his new novel, "At the Blue Bell Inn." The scenes are all transacted in the English village of Westshire. One period of English life furnishes all the characters—the exciting period of the revolution under Cromwell. One observer, in qualnt old English tells the stories—the gossiping landlord of the "Blue Bell," and his pretty, young daughter, Prissy, lends a charm to most of them.

Thus prepared for what is to come the reader may say to himself, I will now "take mine case at mine inn." and listen to the "tales of my landlord." (Chicago: Rand, McNally & Co.)

The Athenic Monthly for 182 offers a splendid array of contributors, many of whom are the recognized molders of public opinion and national thought. The German emperor has made himself and terman emperor has made himself financially responsible for the nublication of a new dictionary of the ancient Egyp-tlan languages. The academies of science— i, e., Berlin, Leupzig, Gottingen and Mu-nich, are to co-operate in its production.

Mr. Israel Zangwill's critical excursion into unfamiliar regions of art is an interesting example of amateur omniscience. According to Mr. Arnold White, he has made more mark as a dreamer than a critic, but the notoriety of unstacked demunication is irresistibly fascinating to an Oriental mind.

Two books of exceptional interest are "Her Memory," by Maarten Maartens, the author of "God's Fool," a delicate and sympathetic character study wherein this fine literary artist has departed from the environments of Holland; and another strong and stirring story, which seems to have been suggested by the Carlist risings in Snain, is "The Phantom Army," by Max Pemberton. They are both published by D. Appleton & Co.

Signs of a revival in the book trade are daily becoming more manifest. Dodd, Mead & Co, report that of their autumn books—though published but a short time—fifteen or twenty have gone into second or third editions. The list of these successes includes books by Paul Leicester Ford, Ian Maclaren, Austin Dobson, Hamilton W. Mable, Alfred Russell Wallace, Jerome K. Jerome, Jane Barlow, Harry Thurston Peck, Paul Laurence Dunbar, Neil Munro, William LeQueux and Martha Finley.

Some most amusing portions of this are published in the Christmas Scribner's, with Stevenson's "Elegy for Some Lead Soldiers."
